EXPANSION

While the Montclair State University campus is expanding physically at a rapid pace, its students are continuously growing and evolving as well. At MSU, students are given the opportunity to grow and flourish in every aspect possible, and are provided with an environment in which they can change and develop as scholars and individuals. Often times with growth comes change, and with change comes choices. Change can be frightening, but without it life would be a monotonous experience. If you expand your horizons, you can expand your mind as well.

YEAH GOGGINS!

SGA President's Message

My fellow Students:

Of all the things we receive in our lifetime, few are as important as the memories we share with others. And of all of the times in our lives when those memories truly matter, few are more pivotal, and for that matter, more memorable, than college.

Each of you - Freshman, Sophomore, Junior, Senior, Super-Senior - contribute an indispensable presence to the campus community of Montclair State University. You hail from a dozen different states, and over 100 countries. You practice different religions, and are driven by different cultures. Each of you is unique, and as a result, so is each memory we share. So, in short, and as depicted by the pages of this yearbook, I have only one more thing to say: Students of MSU - Thank you for the memories!

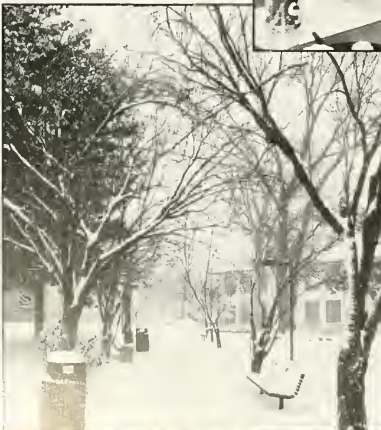

Chris W. Fitzpatrick

Blake Urquhart, Director of Greek Affairs, having a great time at one of the SGA events.

Ron Botelho, SGA Legislator, put business aside, and danced the night away at Senior Bash.

Students couldn't keep members of the Student Government Association from helping the students of MSU.

President Fitzpatrick, and his date, enjoying the festivities. A night like this was a nice reward for hard work.

Legislator Scarlett Morris was always around the SGA office to lend a hand to students and organizations.

Outgoing President Fitzpatrick gives some advice to incoming president Jacob Hudnut.

Being a part of SGA, especially the Legislature, provided an opportunity to form new friendships.

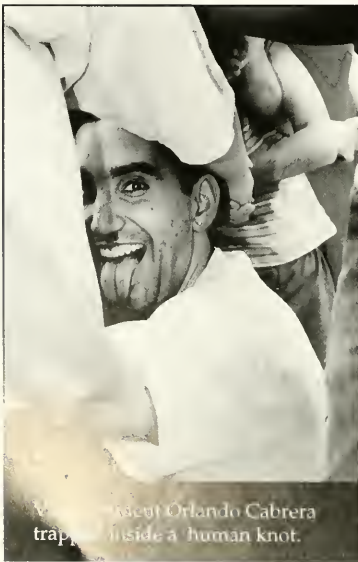

SGA Retreat

The retreat brought together students from different clubs.

Legislators gathered around the campfire to discuss future ideas.

Legislator Orlando Cabrera trapped inside a human knot.

Scar, with a face of determination, attempts to swing across the river.

Group sessions in the evening brought everyone together to talk about the issues at MSU.

Treasurer Derek Macchia proves that he could bend over backwards to do everything he can to help the students.

Secretary Colleen Halpin was always there to give Orlando the kick he needed to keep going and get the job done.

Those at the retreat found that in order to complete certain tasks, they had to work communicate and work together.

Legislator Eric Loree and Treasurer Derek Macchia take a break from the group activities and take aim at the bullseye.

College Hall

With its Spanish colonial architecture, College Hall is the dominant, as well as the most impressive, building on campus. Built in 1908, College Hall stands as the oldest building on campus, housing just a few classrooms in contrast to the many classrooms it held over ninety years ago. It is now home to the Office of the President as well as the many departmental offices. The bell atop this structure remains the icon of Montclair State University, accompanying the school name on its logo.

Still home to the many organizations and services of the SGA, the Student Center continues to be the focal point of most student activities. Built in 1972, with the annex added on in 1982, the building also houses a student cafeteria, ballrooms, the C-store, the bookstore, and the always-popular Rathskellar. Nicknamed "The Ratt", the Rathskellar is a place where students can find food at just about any time of the day, and especially when looking for a midnight snack after spending hours in the 24 hour computer lab.

Student Center

Morehead Hall

Morehead Hall was originally Montclair State University's training ground for future teachers. It was a high school during the early years and today serves as the Academic Success Center, where students can seek academic advising and find help in achieving their career goals with the career services and cooperative education programs offered by the Center.

Dedicated to Henry A. Sprague, the second president of the university, Sprague Library holds within its walls over one million books, several viewing and listening rooms, hundreds of periodicals in hard copy and/or microfiche or film, and a computer lab.

Sprague Library

Chapin Hall

Originally a residence hall at Montclair State University, Chapin Hall is now an academic building and home to the Center of Pedagogy and the Teacher Education Program. It holds classrooms, faculty and departmental offices, and the Curriculum Resource Center, which acts as a resource library for MSU's future teachers.

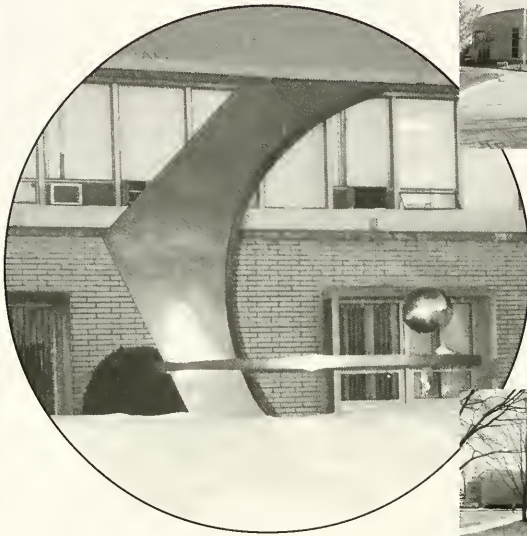

Dickson Hall was built in the early 1990's to house the College of Humanities and Social Sciences. It holds departmental offices, a faculty lounge, and the Brantl Lecture Hall. Its most popular feature, however, is the Red Hawk Express lunch truck parked outside, where students can run out to grab a quick bite to eat in between classes.

Dickson Hall

Life Hall/Memorial Aud.

The Theater and Broadcasting Department's home is here at Life Hall and Memorial Auditorium. The auditorium was built in 1957 and seats over one thousand people. It is often used by the Theater Department for their performances. Life Hall holds a dance studio, numerous classrooms, and the Dumont TV Center used by Broadcasting students.

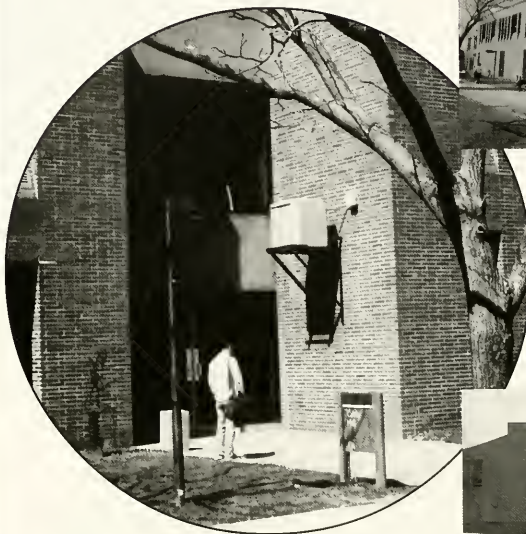

Dedicated in 1962 to Edna McEachern, former chairperson of the Music Department at Montclair State University, McEachern Music Building features a recital hall, two rehearsal rooms, and many private practice studios. Its locker-lined halls where students store their music and instruments have been noted to resemble those of a high school.

McEachern Music Building

Calcia Hall

Dedicated to the first chairperson of the Fine Arts Department, Calcia Hall is home to this department. As a result, its halls are filled with student artwork. The lawn is covered by sculptures, and the building itself is decorated with sculpted placards, colored tiles, and an intricately designed gate, all representative of the creativity and imagination that flows within its walls.

As is written above its doors, Richardson Hall is home to the College of Science and Mathematics. The building contains many computer and science labs, as well as a few lecture halls with the old-fashioned stadium seating. Particularly, it is home to Computer Science, Mathematics, and Physics majors.

Richardson Hall

Science Hall

Completed in 2000, Science Hall stands as one of the newest additions to the MSU campus. Though it experienced many problems upon first being opened, Science Hall is now completely up and running. It houses several science labs, department offices, and a greenhouse. One of its distinguishing features, though, is the mosaic displayed in the front hall of the building.

Finley Hall was dedicated to Charles S. Finley, former Dean of Instruction, in 1957. Mallory Hall was added in later years and dedicated to Virgil Mallory in 1963, former chairperson of the Math Department. Though Mallory's rooms serve students from different majors, Finley's rooms are mostly dedicated to the natural sciences.

Mallory/Finley Hall

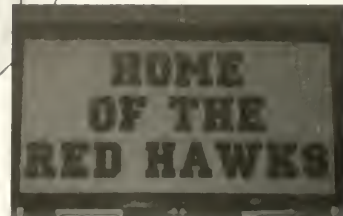

Floyd Hall Arena

Completed in recent years, Floyd Hall Arena holds two ice skating rinks open to the MSU community and to the public. It is home to many league hockey teams, as well as to the champion Red Hawks Ice Hockey Team, and offers many instructive programs and clinics for anyone interested in hockey and/or figure skating.

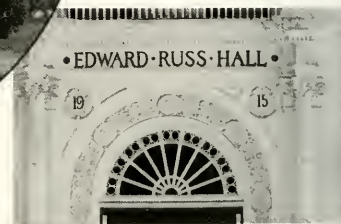

Once the Panzer College of Physical Education and Hygiene, Panzer Gym was dedicated to Henry Panzer, the Swiss-born gymnast, in 1958. It houses classrooms for physical education majors, several gyms, and a swimming pool, as well as a fitness room for student use. The football field can be found directly behind the gym.

Panzer Gymnasium

Russ Hall

Russ Hall was originally built to be a residence hall, though later made an office building. In 1997, it was returned to its roots and once again made a living establishment. Its rooms are assigned through an application process, and even then it is very selective. A nice plus: air conditioning and a microfridge.

Though originally built only for temporary housing, the Clove Road apartments are still standing, and still lived in, approximately twenty years later. These apartments offer upperclassmen the convenience of on-campus living, yet without the on-campus rules. The living room, kitchen, and bathtub are other added incentives.

Clove Road Apts.

Freeman Hall

Freeman Hall is one of the older residence halls on campus, having been built in 1963, which is evident when one notices the brightly colored panels in the windows. Located on the southern end of campus, Freeman Hall is set far apart from most of the other residence halls, adding a little more peace and quiet for the students who choose to live there.

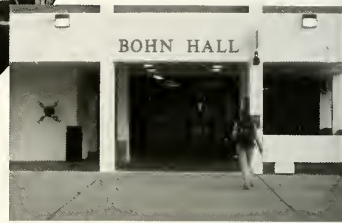

Built in 1969, Partridge Hall was dedicated to E. Dalton Partridge, this university's third president. Through once home to the College of Humanities and Social Sciences, the Accounting, Finance, Marketing, and Information Sciences majors from the School of Business can now be found roaming its halls and filling its classrooms.

Partridge Hall

Bohn Hall

Built in 1971 and originally a females-only residence hall, Bohn Hall is now the tallest co-ed residence hall on campus with sixteen stories of rooms, offices, and classrooms. In total, it houses approximately 550 students and more freshmen than any other building. Bohn Hall is also one of the few residence halls on campus with community bathrooms.

Webster Hall is the only single-sex residence hall on campus. Built in 1962, it houses approximately 100 women. However, its small size only adds to the sense of pride of its residents as is evident by a sign that hangs in its front hall which reads: "Welcome to our Queen-dom."

Webster Hall

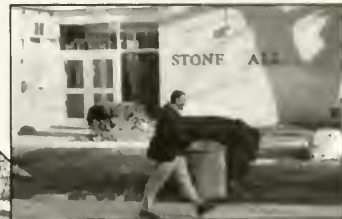

Blanton Hall

Blanton Hall is the largest residence hall on campus, with approximately 600 students living within its walls. It was built in 1980 and has one of the two cafeterias for on-campus residents, with the other cafeteria in the Freeman annex. It is the only building on campus with rooms that face into the building.

Originally the male-only residence hall on campus, Stone Hall has been co-ed since 1993. It has served as a residence hall for more years than any other on campus. In addition, because of its small size, Stone Hall residents are all very close and all share a strong sense of pride in their community.

Stone Hall

Homecoming

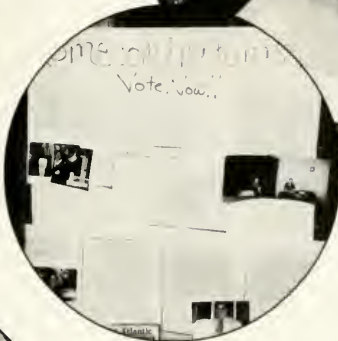

As shown on this Homecoming shirt, the theme this year was "MSU on Broadway."

Students cast their ballots on who they wanted to be this year's Homecoming king and queen.

CLUB, who puts together Homecoming every year, made sure everything ran smoothly.

Expansion on Campus

Thoughts on MSU by President Cole

Albert Einstein said nothing moves faster than the speed of light. At Montclair State University, we may just prove him wrong. I hyperbolize to illustrate the rapid pace of development and comprehensive growth at Montclair State.

Construction projects are all over our campus, beginning with our new 1,100-space parking garage. The garage, one of three planned for campus, opened in January, and is a giant--and handsome-- step in relieving one of our persistent problems: too many vehicles for too few parking spaces.

As the final touches were being put on the parking garage, work on the 500-seat Alexander Kasser Theater began, with an expected completion date of Spring 2004. This $27.5 million state-of-the-art project will allow the University's theater, music and dance programs to perform in a site worthy of their talents. The theater is named in honor of the late Alexander Kasser, an international philanthropist and art lover whose family made a $4 million leadership gift to the project.

Work has also been well underway on our new residential village on Clove Road. The $77.7 million project will provide 850 beds and 550 parking spaces for our students when completed in August 2003.

Wheels are turning right across the street from those new residence halls: We were joined by New Jersey Gov. James E. McGreevey on Sept. 30 as we celebrated an agreement to build a New Jersey Transit train station that will accommodate the new MidTOWN Direct line into New York's Penn Station. Construction has begun on an affiliated 1,500-space parking garage and pedestrian walkway. When the station opens in 2004, MSU and the Big Apple will only be a short train ride apart, a linkage that will be an exciting asset for our students.

I haven't even mentioned our new academic building, which will be the University's largest building when it opens in 2005, the continuing infusion of technology in our learning programs, or a host of other developments.

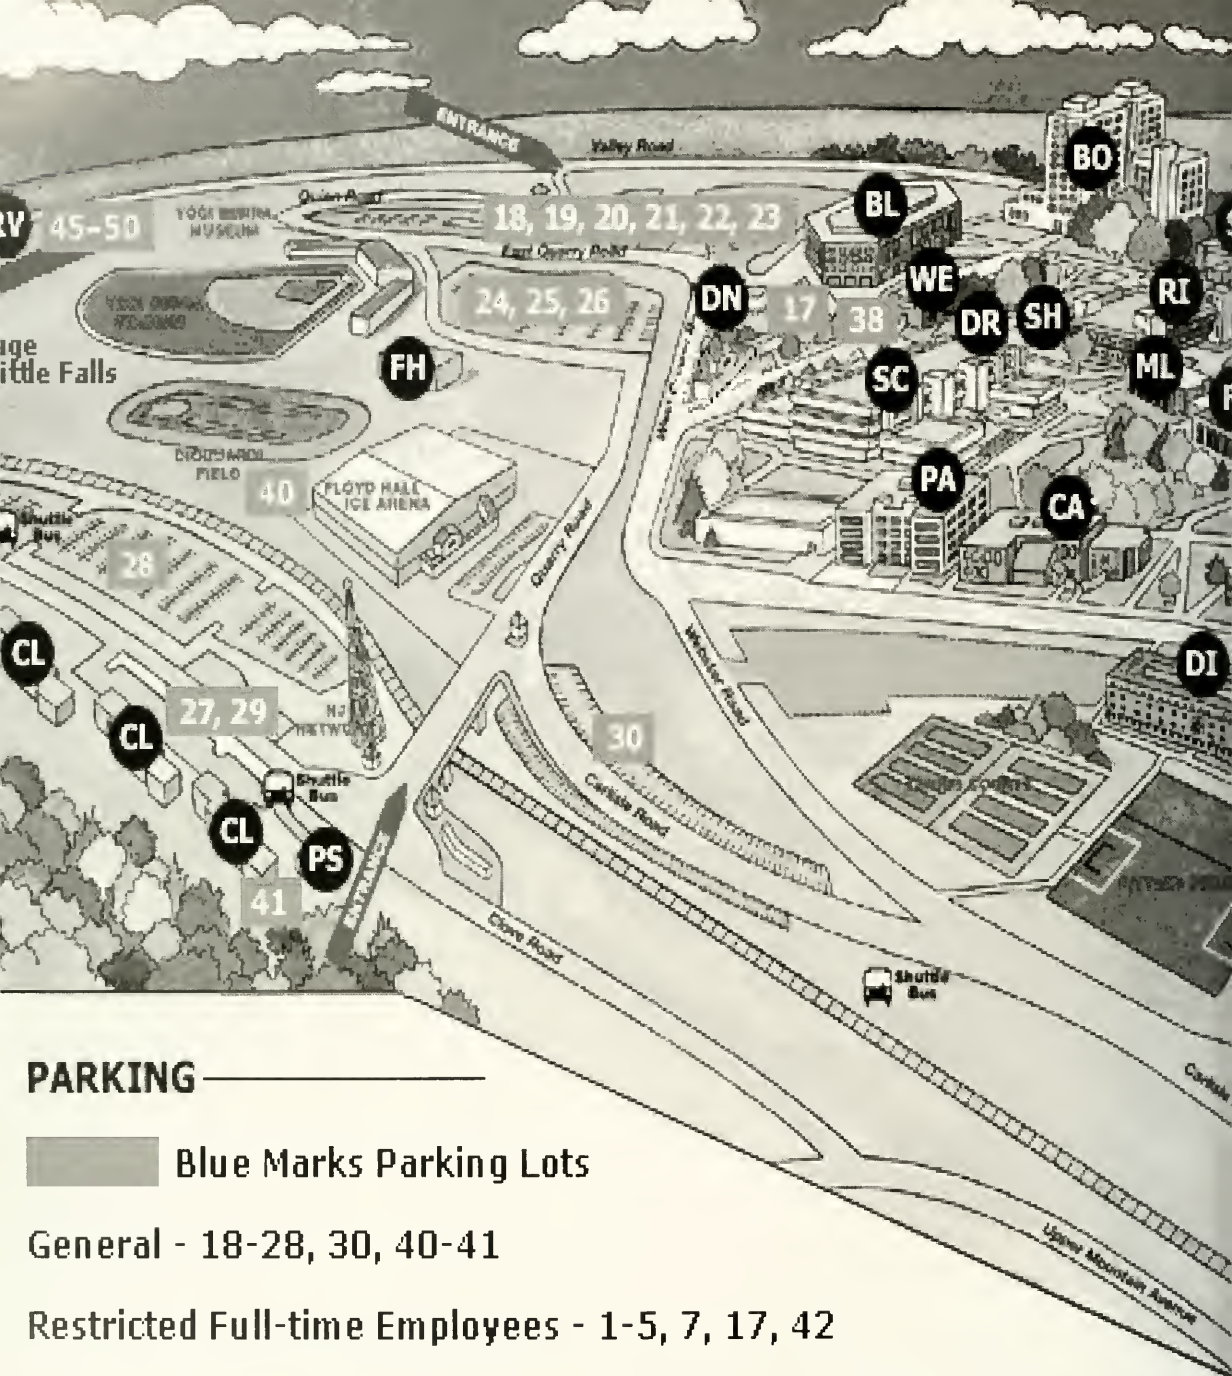

On a less noticeable, but nevertheless important, front, we now have sprinklers in 100 percent of our residence halls and plan to have completed an upgrade of all electrical and water utilities, repairs that have long been overdue.

This bustle greeted a large, diverse and highly qualified freshman class this year. Undergraduate enrollment is up by 8 percent while our graduate school enrollment tops 3,700 students, a 7-percent increase. We also welcomed 38 new faculty members who bring outstanding academic credentials to the University.

Memorial Auditorium was filled to capacity on Opening Day as the University community gathered to celebrate an exciting academic year and to reaffirm our commitment to assuring that Montclair State University is a recognized center for excellence in teaching and learning, and fosters an environment in which each student is challenged to attain his or her full potential.

Red Hawk Deck

The beginning of the spring semester saw the opening of the university's first parking garage. The university elicited suggestions for a name for it, and after receiving 250 responses, the "Red Hawk Deck" was chosen and approved by the Board of Trustees. The garage is open seven days a week from 6:00 A.M. until 2:00 A.M. There are 1100 available parking spaces, with 750 of those being reserved for faculty.

Full-time university employees are able to purchase an annual parking permit for $450. This grants them access to the deck any time during its operating hours. Since there are a limited number of permits, once they are sold out, applicants are put on a waiting list to receive them. Faculty that choose to buy a permit receive an automatic vehicle identification transponder that automatically opens the entrance and exit gates of the deck. They are also given a swipe card that allows them to park in any of the university's other staff parking lots. Students, visitors, or other full or part-time employees can use the other 350 parking spaces not used by permit-holders. These customers pay using the state-of-the-art automated pay stations. Upon entering the garage, you are given a ticket encoded with the time you arrived. Once you are ready to leave, you insert your ticket into a pay station where it will tell you how much you owe.

Like most other things at MSU, the parking deck did not go without its own share of controversy. After months of construction, it was scheduled to open on January 13th. However, due to delays and internal problems, the deck was not ready for its grand opening. The Red Hawk Deck finally opened its gates on Tuesday, January 28, 2003. There was also some dispute over the prices being charged for usage of the deck. Students and faculty were disturbed by what they considered to be high prices for the privilege of parking in the new parking garage. Parking Services claimed that any parking structure such as this would have to be self-sustaining and pay for itself. Students and faculty may realize, though, that with more construction coming and limited parking spaces available, that they may have no choice but to patronize the Red Hawk Deck.

Alexander Kasser Theater

The distinguished Washington D.C. attorney, former Montclair mayor, and former U.S. Senate candidate Mary V. Mochary took to the podium at the University's annual fundraising dinner, where more than 260 guests were gathered to support the construction of a new theater that will bear her father's name.

"About 50 years ago, my parents were living in Long Island and they found that they had a child prodigy in the family, and it wasn't me," Mochary joked. "It was my brother and they had to decide where to send him to school because he had a special mind and they wanted a very special school for him. Out of all the schools in the metropolitan area he could have gone to, they chose Montclair State College High School, which was the demonstration school at Montclair State. That was the reason we came to Montclair and we loved it."

Mochary and her brother, I. Michael Kasser, along with other family members, made a $4-million leadership gift to the theater in honor of their late father, Alexander Kasser, a philanthropist, art lover and one-time Montclair resident.

The 500-seat, $19-million Alexander Kasser Theater will celebrate Kasser's life and accomplishments and be a permanent tribute to the family's enduring commitment to Montclair, the arts and philanthropy. "Montclair State is an important part of our family history," Kasser said. "While our parents were truly a couple of the world, they retained a special place in their hearts for this community and its people." Designed by the leading architectural firm the Hiller Group, the theater is scheduled to open in 2004. "I am very grateful to the Mochary/Kasser family," Montclair State President Susan A. Cole said. "What they have started to build here is going to stand for generations. Thanks to their generosity, thousands upon thousands of students, faculty and members of the community are going to have opportunities for learning, teaching and access to the arts that otherwise would never have been available to them."

Mochary said the gift is the family's way of giving back "to an institution and a community that has done so much for us. We are delighted to be able to do this. I hope this gift we are giving and this wonderful theater will continue to provide opportunities to talented people for generations to come."

In Budapest, Alexander Kasser earned an engineering degree from the University of Grenoble, France. By age 29, he was managing the largest paper mill in Easter Europe. In 1944 he organized and co-directed the Swedish Red Cross in Hungary, a group of humanitarians who worked to save hundreds of persecuted Jews. In 1997 he was awarded the title of "Righteous Among the Nations" by the Holocaust Museum in Yad Cashem, Israel. Dr. Kasser died in 1997 at the age of 88.

Child Care Center

TTI

A new Children's Center at Montclair State University "will be an integral part of a vital University that is growing and developing in service to the people of New Jersey," MSU President Dr. Susan A. Cole said at the University's annual "Building a Brighter Future" dinner.

"The Children's Center will allow us to expand and enhance vital services for young children and their families," she said. "It will be a national model for inclusive early childhood education where children with disabilities will learn, play and grow. Together, they will discover that what they share is far more profound than their differences."

The Children's Center role will be multifaceted. It will serve as the new home for the University's Psychoeducational and Child Care Centers. The Psychoeducational Center provides early intervention programs for infants and toddlers with special developmental needs and the Child Care Center offers developmentally appropriate programs for children three months to six years of age.

Murray L. Cole, chair of the Montclair State University Foundation and member of the University's Board of Trustees, said that "The Children's Center will bring these two programs together in one setting, allowing special needs children the opportunity to learn in an inclusive environment with their same-age peers."

Two other important programs will be housed in the Child Care Center: The Demonstration Program enrolls three to five year-olds who have been diagnosed with autism, also called pervasive development disorder; and the Jeffrey Dworkin Early Childhood Program, which serves children from infancy through age three who have a wide variety of special developmental needs.

The 27,000-square foot building will be located at the northern edge of campus and will have the capacity to serve up to 500 children each year. In addition, the Center will also serve as a site for faculty and student research. The Center also will provide field experience in the education of 400 early childhood teachers a year. Containing two classroom pods and an academic core, the Center will feature ample outdoor play spaces and is scheduled to open in Fall 2004.

The new facility is necessary to alleviate space problems, which force the Demonstration Program and the Dworkin Early Childhood Program into facilities inadequate for the vital services they provide. The Child Care Center -- which is open to children of MSU students and staff as well as those from surrounding communities -- has a capped waiting list of more than 1,000 families. "The new building is key to our ability to provide an environment that recognizes the special needs of the children," Dr. Cole said.

Softball Stadium

Head Softball Coach Anita Kubicka looks forward to the start of every season, but this year she's even more pumped to get her team on the field in the new softball stadium. Constructed on the existing field adjacent to the running track, the new stadium can accommodate 263 fans in bleacher and stadium-molded VIP seats. The facility also includes a press box, locker rooms and a concession area. Having locker rooms on site, Kubicka said, will make a difference for the team.

"From a coaching standpoint, the ability to bring the players from the field right into the locker rooms to view game video is great," she said. "I'm looking forward to having the ability to videotape the game from the press box, getting great footage and then meeting with the team and reviewing the tape right there at the field." Night games can now be part of the schedule thanks to new lighting, and a Daktronics scoreboard replaces the one that was more than 20 years old.

The stadium is made of concrete with a stucco finish coat that keeps with Spanish mission-style architecture on campus. The field is completed and the stadium is expected to be done by the end of the year. The old grass field was replaced with artificial turf, which Becky Middleton of Architectural and Engineering Services says is a huge improvement in both appearance and maintenance. "It's incredible," she said. "It drains great and looks just like grass. The best part is that it is practically maintenance free because it doesn't have to be watered. The old field looked terrible and never drained."

The outfield is made of sand and rubber particles that come from recycled sneaker soles, and the clay infield has an irrigation system that is activated with the push of a button. "Anita no longer has to stand out there watering the infield with a hose," Middleton said. "Field Turf is really great," said the winningest coach in MSU softball history. "It's the same material used in Giants Stadium. The National Football League endorses it because it plays like natural grass, and the sand-rubber mix is actually the best for softball."

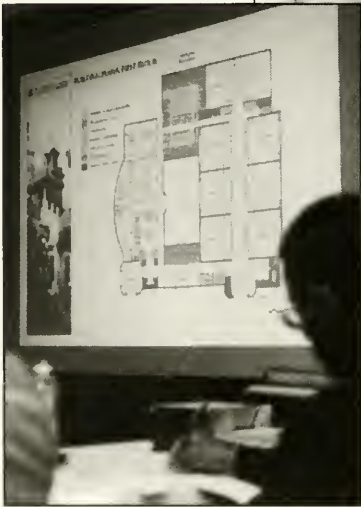

"The old grass field", Kubicka said, "caused a myriad of problems. "Because the field is located at one of the lowest points on campus, water always drained down into it and it had nowhere to go," she explained. "It was like a pond after a heavy rain. We actually had to cancel games because the field was so bad. No matter what we did, the grass wouldn't grow. It was very frustrating, so we started to think about alternatives to natural grass."

"I love the look of it," she said. "It looks like real grass, but is more forgiving on the players' knees." Kubicka is recommending the players wear a certain type of cleat that works well with the turf.

The softball team had an opportunity to play on the new surface during the alumni game, and outfielder Tiffany Aciz, a junior physical education major, gave it two thumbs up. "It's faster than grass," she said. "You get a true, straight bounce and it's easier to play on."

New Academic Building

At 270,000 square feet, the new academic building will be about the size of the Red Hawk Deck. Located on Lot 14, it has an open space design, which allows for future expansion and renovation. The building, with four floors on one side and seven on the other, surrounds an outdoor courtyard that will have paved areas with benches, tables and chairs to allow for functions and daily study and student-faculty interaction space. In keeping with the University's Spanish colonial style buildings, the courtyard resembles Moorish gardens of Spain. A focal point will be a 120-foot bell tower on the building's northeast corner. "The new academic building will be a remarkable resource for the campus community," said Provost Richard Lynde. "We are quite excited about the design of the building and the impact it will have on teaching and learning, as well as scholarship and outreach at the University."

The building will be home to the College of Education and Human Services. Office and instructional space include a dean's suite, 125 faculty offices, eight specialized learning labs, six department offices and 28 adjunct faculty work stations. Also housed in the building will be the ADP Center for Teacher Preparation and Learning Technology, the Center for Pedagogy, a Literacy Enrichment Center, and the Institute for the Advancement of Philosophy for Children. Shared space includes five conference rooms, two study rooms, one large function room and two grants areas. Classroom space includes eight 100-seat lecture halls and 29 classrooms with 30 to 40 seats. Information Technology also will have space in the new building for its network operations and data center as well as training classrooms, offices and workstations. "An elaborated version of the Solutions Center, currently located in College Hall, will be on the fifth floor," Steve Ansel, one of the designers, said. The seventh-floor conference center will have a spectacular view of New York, a ballroom that can accommodate groups of up to 520 people, a private dining area for groups of 40 or less and a full-service kitchen. "About 5,000 people will pass in and out of the building each day," said Ansel. "It's designed and organized internally to allow for that flow." Construction on the $54 million facility is expected to begin in the fall of 2003 with an expected opening of Fall 2005.

MidTOWN Direct Line

You can get there from here...and now it's a whole lot easier. Although NJ TRANSIT's MidTOWN Direct Service has been available from Morris County for six years, the new Montclair-Boonton connection is getting passengers from Essex and Passaic counties to Penn Station, New York, without having to transfer trains in Hoboken or Newark. The new line began in September, but the best is yet to come. A 1,500 space parking garage and train station being built on the Montclair State campus will be a much welcomed convenience for residents of the University's neighboring towns, where parking at existing stations is at a premium. The $26 million project, expected to be completed in 2004, is a collaborative effort among Montclair State, NJ TRANSIT and the New Jersey

Economic Development Authority. Meanwhile, commuters can get the MidTOWN Direct service from the nearby Montclair Heights station. The new facility will greatly benefit the University's commuting population as well as residential students who like to take advantage of Montclair State's proximity to Manhattan. "This is a direct, safe and easy way for our students to take advantage of cultural opportunities in New York City," said Montclair State President Susan A. Cole. The new service also is expected to boost the University's presence across the Hudson. "It will connect us to Midtown Manhattan and a substantial student population there," she said. "This project will enable us to encourage mass transit and allow New Jersey's second largest educational institution to work with NJ TRANSIT and the state." The station, which will be connected by a pedestrian overpass to the parking garage, is being constructed on the west side of the campus. "In addition to providing convenient mass transportation for the students, faculty, staff and visitors, this project also will provide another much-needed parking facility for our growing university," Cole said. In June, Gov. James E. McGreevey came to the campus to announce the creation of the new MidTOWN Direct line.

The Village

The four residence halls are named for jazz genius William (Count) Basie; for noted poet and pediatrician William Carlos Williams; for women's rights champion Alice Paul; and for pioneering New Jersey Congresswoman Millicent Hammond Fenwick.

The University, in an innovative naming plan, suggested the names of 32 famous New Jerseyans and asked members of the campus community for their input.

"Our students came up with 16 names they favored from that list," said Dr. Susan A. Cole, president of MSU. "We took these names to the entire campus community and asked for their input and suggestions for additional names. Following this broad University participation, we had a good sense of what the feelings on campus were.

"Based on that, we came up with this list. We wanted names that were diverse, interesting and not commonly seen on buildings in New Jersey. We wanted not only to honor our state's heritage, but also to be a little bit creative." "It really was a way to get the students involved in naming the halls in their new residential village," said Dr. Karen L. Pennington, vice president for Student Development and Campus Life. "Rather than following a traditional procedure we thought it would be fun to do this, and we also felt it would be a wonderful way to honor some of the greats who have brought such honor to the Garden State."

The 780,000-square-foot Spanish Mission style complex has 850 beds in 212 apartments. Amenities in each apartment feature appliances including dishwasher, electric range and refrigerator; apartment-controlled air conditioning and eat-in kitchen. The facility is fully sprinklered, handicapped accessible, entry controlled and served by shuttle buses.

Yottee Prescott Architecture & Engineering P.C. was the project's design firm. Construction was done by Terminal Construction Corporation of Wood-Ridge, N.J., and Vollers Excavating & Construction of North Branch, N.J. Construction cost approximately $65 million.

William Count Basie

Jazz pianist and conductor (William) Count Basie was born in Red Bank in 1904. His mother was a music teacher, and at a young age he became her pupil. But it was in Harlem that he learned the rudiments of ragtime piano, principally from his sometime organ teacher, the great Fats Waller. Basie made his professional debut as an accompanist for vaudeville acts. In 1929, he was hired by Bennie Moten's Band and played piano with them. Moten's death in 1935 altered Basie's career dramatically. He took over the remnants of the band, expanded it and formed the first Count Basie Orchestra.

The name "Count" was a 1935 promotional gimmick, paralleling "Duke" Ellington and "Earl" Hines. Within a year or so the band had developed its own variation of the basic Kansas City swing style. By 1937 Basie's band was, with the possible exception of Ellington's, the most highly acclaimed African American band in America.

He received an honorary doctoral degree from MSU in 1982. He died in 1984.

Millicent Hammond Fenwick

Millicent Hammond Fenwick was born in New York City in 1910. Fenwick, who attended Foxcroft School, Columbia University and the New School for Social Research, faced tragedy at an early age when her mother was lost in the sinking of the Lusitania. Following her upper-class childhood and a failed marriage, she began a 14-year career at Vogue magazine.

In the 1960s, Fenwick became involved in the civil rights movement and took part in state and local politics. When this colorful figure – one of only five New Jersey women ever elected to Congress – went to Washington as a freshman representative in 1975 at age 64, her victory was hailed by the media as a "geriatric triumph."

Affectionately remembered as the pipe-smoking grandmother who many believe served as the model for Garry Trudeau's Doonesbury character Lacey Day-empont, she transcended that stereotype to become, in the words of Walter Cronkite, "the conscience of Congress." Fenwick served in Congress from 1975 to 1983. The Bernardsville resident died in 1992.

Alice Paul

Social reformer and lawyer, Alice Paul was born in Mt. Laurel in 1885. She graduated from Swarthmore in 1905 and went on to do graduate work in New York City and England. She took her Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1912, the same year she became chairperson of the Congressional Committee of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. Impatient with its policies, in 1913 she helped to found the more militant Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, which merged in 1917 to form the National Woman's Party; she would become this party's chairperson in 1942.

After women won the right to vote with the 19th Amendment (1920), she devoted herself to gaining equal rights for women and in 1923 introduced the first equal rights amendment in Congress. She had meanwhile studied law and broadened her field to the international arena. Although she did not live to see an equal rights amendment to the U.S. Constitution, she did get an equal rights affirmation in the preamble to the United Nations charter. She died in 1977.

William Carlos Williams

William Carlos Williams was born in Rutherford in 1883. Following schooling in Switzerland, he began at the dental school of the University of Pennsylvania, but transferred to the medical school and received his degree in 1906. After studying in Germany, Williams opened a private pediatric practice in Rutherford in 1910. In addition to his medical practice, he was a serious and committed writer. He wrote the introduction for Allen Ginsberg's first book of poetry in 1955.

World War II and his busy practice with civilian patients nearly brought his writing career to a halt. But in 1946, "Paterson I," the first book of the epic poem he had been struggling to write for nearly 20 years, was published. He was made a fellow of the Library of Congress in 1952. He won the National Book Award for "Selected Poems" and "Paterson III" (1950), and the Pulitzer Prize for poetry for "Pictures from Brueghel and Other Poems" (1963, posthumously). Williams died in Rutherford in 1963. The first of several biographies was Reed Whittemore's "William Carlos Williams: Poet from New Jersey" (1975).
